From Adam

"Everyone deserves a home, but home is something more than a house. A house is a building; a home is a dwelling place. A house is made of wood or brick or mud or thatch; a home is made of stories and relationships and memories. Houses can be bought and sold but home is never up for sale. A home is a bounded place that provides both definition and openness, structure and flexibility. It is a place and space, a comforting web of stories and symbols and rituals and relationships where a common life is cultivated and human flourishing happens." (Fred Liggin, Founder & President of 3e Restoration).

Fred is a dear friend of mine. I love what he says in the above quote. I have found it to be true in my life, my ministry with those living through homelessness and extreme poverty, and in my study of the scriptures. Genesis 1 is far more than an explanation of how the world we live in came into existence, it's about God building a home for himself and his image-bearing creation. Creation is a place where we live with God and God lives with us. It has always been God's desire for everyone to have a home.

The fatherless and motherless are by default homeless, based on Fred's description of homelessness. It breaks God's heart. It breaks my heart. It ought to break the heart of the church and compel us to join what God is already doing to care and love those without a home.
