From Adam

I love Facebook memories. Facebook reminded me of this post from several years ago, "Elijah was running behind this morning and missed the bus. He started crying and said he was having a bad morning. He was playing outside while he waited for me to take him to school and came bouncing in the house with a smile on his face. I met him in the hallway and he said,

"Today has turned out to be a fun day. I found two worms, a slug and I got to see two fire trucks!" Gratitude for the small things in life can make the heart glad.

A grateful heart is the key to true happiness, good health, and a tool for overcoming mental and emotional anguish. This is a fact that researchers at universities such as UCLA, California, and Miami have discovered. A study conducted by UCLA's Mindfulness Awareness Research Center reveals, "Having an attitude of gratitude changes the molecular structure of the brain, keeps gray matter functioning, and makes us healthier and happier. When you feel happiness, the central nervous system is affected. You are more peaceful, less reactive and less resistant. Now that's a really cool way of taking care of your well-being."

God always knows what is good for us — always. Calling us to always be thankful (Philippians 4:4-7, 1 Thessalonians 5:16-18) is his way of inviting us into the abundant life, a healthy life, and a hopeful life.

I hope you have a happy Thanksgiving, and that gratitude is an attitude you cultivate every day of the year.
